

The Upper Columbia River: it all fits together

The Upper Columbia River region is home to people, fish and wildlife species, as well as industrial needs and recreational opportunities.

How all of these aspects of the river environment fit together is a complex and important issue.

Understanding the unique inter-connection between land, water, wildlife, and people is important in answering the questions of "can I eat the fish, play on the beaches, and swim in the water?"